

Telelingua Project Solutions

FORAS External Solution

A successful multilingual market presence is increasingly in demand in all industries and markets. This is on the one hand due to increasing translation volumes and faster turnaround times and on the other hand to the specific expertise that all participants involved in the process bring to the table to ensure efficient and smooth processing.

High-performance solutions for optimized processes and workflows in translation production

The ever-changing need for translation is increasing every day. In order to ensure efficient, reliable, and high-quality multilingual market coverage in the future, external language departments find themselves needing to continuously optimize and adapt their own translation processes accordingly. In the event of a short-term increase in demand, the following factors play an important role in being prepared to meet that demand: Fast turnaround times, higher productivity, consistent and uniform translation quality, and high flexibility.

Let 30 years of market presence speak for itself: Telelingua has the expertise, experience and innovative spirit to advise your company on the best translation processes and workflow structures for improving the performance and flexibility of your language department. If you need a custom software solution, let Telelingua design it for you or use the programs specially developed by Telelingua for the language services industry.

The core business of Telelingua Project Solutions includes process optimization, i.e. the translation processing supply chain. This starts with the design of individual language departments with proven technologies and extends to advanced automation packages and efficient use of translation memories and terminology databases. If desired, an external language department can be set up for this purpose - either on your own premises or at a Telelingua office near you.

TPS takes care of the overall concept development of your external language department - from staffing and training of new specialists, to configuration of processes and workflows, to the selection of suitable software and integration into your existing systems. Thanks to our centralized knowledge documentation we create the optimal conditions for your flexibility with regard to personnel and services. Telelingua Project Solutions takes care of all aspects - from process and workflow creation and integration, to specialist searches and translation service provider call for tenders.
